Dear friends,

We are pleased to share with you WSKG’s Annual Report to the Community.

When we reflect on the achievements presented in the following pages, it’s clear that WSKG’s story begins with you.

You deserve the best programming possible. Programming that isn’t driven by commercial interests. Programming that celebrates the diversity and creativity of our unique communities and makes you proud to support your local public media station, WSKG.

Together, we’ve accomplished so much this past year. With the help of community partners, we produced a number of programs that addressed local topics of interest such as early childcare education, area graduation rates, unemployment in the Southern Tier, and regional politics. Our content teams researched and produced programs in specific interest areas of history, arts, news, science, and education. Local news coverage increased; we hired a managing editor for the newsroom and saw a record number of contributions by WSKG news to NPR news magazines. And in this ever-changing world of media, WSKG embraced the future of technology and is now poised to deliver the content you want, how and when you want it.

We’re very proud to be part of a community that generously invests in public media. Our members and partners make it possible for WSKG to provide the very best public media service possible. Thank you.

With gratitude,

Brian Sickora

Quality Programs for an Extraordinary Community
WSKG is home to favorites such as Masterpiece: Downton Abbey, Antiques Roadshow, Nova, American Experience, PBS Newshour, Morning Edition, All Things Considered and an outstanding line-up of award-winning kids’ programming. WSKG is equally proud to bring you the best locally produced programs – arts programs that feature the variety and richness of artistic talent and cultural experiences in the Southern Tier; history programs that tell the fascinating stories about our region and the people who helped to shape our neighborhoods; informative, local news reports from our Vestal-based newsroom; and programs that work directly with youth to help them understand the value of an education. WSKG’s studio welcome hundreds of community members into our studio for live performances and screening events of local and national productions.
Expressions celebrated its 8th season with an array of back-to-back in-studio live performances that included an incredibly diverse group of musicians who are a testament of the talented individuals who work and live in our Upstate New York and Northeast Pennsylvania communities. The season started on November 6th with an exciting live broadcast performance by Ithaca’s moxy music band The Blind Spots and on November 13th, young classical pianist from Cortland, Emmanuel Sikora offered our audience a repertoire of his own short compositions called Miniatures. The Sim Redmond band performed high energy Afro-Caribbean roots music to a packed studio that aired on November 20th. On May 7th, WSKG aired a special presentation of The Sultana, a musical journey produced by Jeff Stachyra. Inspired by the historical event, on the 150th anniversary of the steamboat tragedy, WSKG’s one-hour special included over thirty local musicians and performers who paid tribute to the soldiers who lost their lives in the wake of the Civil War. The season culminated with an exquisite classical piano performance by Belarussian-born American pianist Olga Krayterman who delighted our studio audience with compositions by J.S Bach, F. Liszt, F. Chopin and A. Scriabin. WSKG welcomed more than 300 people into our studio for these one-of-a-kind live music performances.

Let’s Polka
The 5th season of Let’s Polka with host Bill Flynn featured an exciting line-up of upcoming as well as established Polka bands, musicians who traveled from all corners of our coverage area and beyond. Polka Quads from Steelton, Pennsylvania; Joe Weber Band from Pittsburgh; Tony’s Polka Band from Albany; Piatkowski Brothers from Syracuse; and The Polka Brothers from New York City. The “Dance Cam” captures the excitement of Polka Club members as they enjoy the performance and Polka to some of their favorites!

Cultural Partnerships

WSKG Arts developed new partnerships with the Roy H. Park School of Communications at Ithaca College Visual Journalism and Field Production, The Binghamton Film Initiative (BFI), and SUNYWIDE Film Festival. In collaboration with these institutions, we offered feedback to emerging filmmakers and in return acquired permission to use their visual materials as content for TV interstitials and web content. WSKG Arts continues to nurture and strengthen our partnership with The Corning Museum of Glass through the acquisition of locally made production, Artist-in-Residence, and the in-house interview and production of promotional piece featuring internationally renown artists the Lad Brothers in celebration of the opening of the museum’s new exhibitions wing. WSKG hosted local arts organization Memory Makers, which provides a cultural experience for people who live with memory loss, and welcomed the community for screenings of Masterpiece series Poldark, Indian Summers, and Downton Abbey.

Arts and Culture Shorts

Arts and Culture Shorts is WSKG’s exciting new way of highlighting the distinct stories behind some of the most extraordinary local talents, world-class institutions and all that is quirky and artsy that make upstate New York so unique. The stories aired on TV and are also available on-demand and on WSKG.org. Some of the local artists featured include: jazz singer from Corning Sharada Shahidhar, pottery artist from Ithaca Tomas Black, The Phoenix Players Theater group for the Auburn penitentiary, glass artist from Owego Frank Bocek, metal sculptor from Richfield Springs Amy Tavern, Norwich singer Kaitlyn Jackson, and events such as Grassroots, Glimmerglass, and many more. In addition, through a recent partnership with Ithaca College, students from the school of communications provide WSKG’s Arts with short arts segments from their area.

Sip and Swirl

Sip and Swirl is a mini series that tells the collective stories of the people and winemaking culture that compose the unique terroir of the Finger Lakes region. The series aired in the month of September of 2014, and it is also available on-demand at WSKG.org. Featured wineries and vineyards include: Cayuga Lake, Montezuma Winery, Bellwether Hard Cider, Keuka Lake’s Bully Hill Vineyards, Pleasant Valley Wine Company, Hunt Country Vineyards, Seneca Lake’s Damiani Wine Cellars, Wagner Vineyards, and Hazlitt 1852 Vineyards.
Local History comes to Life

This past year WSKG History released the first 72 videos of our Uniquely New York video series. Made with the support of New York’s I Love New York and Path Through History initiatives, each video highlights a different museum, park, or other historic destination within our viewing area and can be found through an interactive map on the WSKG.org.

WSKG History premiered Class of the Century, a new local history documentary from award winning filmmaker Brian Frey. The film explores the lasting impact of the GI Bill on higher education through the voices of historians and members of Cornell’s 1950 alumni.

History fans are in for a treat! WSKG launched two new digital series. Haunted History examined many of the ghost stories that surround historic locations across our viewing area, including Elmira College, Roberson Museum and Science Center, and Hyde Hall. Timeless Toys is a fun look at the stories behind classic American toys like Marx Playsets and Lincoln Logs, and locally produced toys like Manoil toy soldiers.

On April 15, WSKG hosted a presentation sponsored by the Broome County Historical Society on the life of former Heavy Weight Boxing Champion Jack Sharkey. WSKG Director of History and Heritage Brian Frey and local thespian Bill Gorman performed a live dramatic recreation of some of Sharkey’s most colorful moments from his 12-year boxing career. More than 170 people attended the event that was held in the WSKG television studio.
WSKG News saw tremendous successes in 2015. A managing editor joined our growing news team, solidifying WSKG’s commitment to be our community’s source for trusted local, regional, national, and international news.

With the support of community partners and funding from the Community Foundation of South Central New York, the news team covered the early childcare and education issues for the First Five project. Included were a series of in-depth reports and call-in programs that examined early childhood education in our community. WSKG education reporter Solvejg Wastvedt reported on the disappearance of in-home childcare in Tioga Counties, on trends in the distribution of state funds to school districts for the implementation of Pre-K programs, and on the financial challenges faced by childcare facilities and their educators. In addition, WSKG News produced a three-part series of call-in programs on the issue of early childhood education, and assisted in staging an August summit on the issues, conducted in our studios and involving some of our communities’ top education and political leaders.

WSKG also launched a website dedicated almost exclusively to local and regional news, WSKGnews.org. We saw tremendous interest in stories about medical marijuana, the Fitzpatrick Nuclear Power Plant, and the New York 52nd State Senate Special Election. In addition, WSKG developed WSKGvotes.org, which reported on election results from around our service area. Thousands of residents took advantage of the service.

The WSKG News team was honored for its journalism with awards from the New York Associated Press and the nation’s Public Radio News Directors, Inc. (PRNDI). On the 60th anniversary of the Allied Invasion of Normandy, producer Crystal Sarakas interviewed a Binghamton native who fought on that day as a paratrooper. Sarakas was awarded a 2nd place award for Soft Feature, in the small newsrooms category, by PRNDI. Earning a 2nd place prize for News Feature from PRNDI was Monica Sandreczki and the WSKG News team for her contribution to our Collapsing Communities series. Both reporters and stories were also honored by New York’s Associated Press.

“I absolutely cannot live without my NPR. I love it, I look forward to it every day. Your fund drives really do work.”

WSKG leveraged national science content and localized it to fit our community’s needs through a number of screenings and outreach events. WSKG partnered with the Schorr Family Firehouse Stage to offer a screening of Sid the Science Kid for more than 200 families. Pre-service teachers from Binghamton University School of Education assisted WSKG staff to offer hands-on science, technology, engineering, and math (STEM) activities for families before and after the screenings.

WSKG partnered with Roberson Museum and Science Center to host a screening of First Peoples, a global detective story, featuring new fossil finds and the latest genetic research. One hundred people attended the screening and panel discussion at the museum. Panelists included members from both the Binghamton University’s Department of Anthropology and School of Education; Albert White, an American Indian artist and Mohawk Indian Heritage Lecturer; and SUNY Broome Biology Department. Through collaboration and engagement, WSKG was able to offer opportunities for our community to think critically about STEM topics and engage with local experts.

In partnership with Binghamton City Schools, WSKG expanded the SciGirls after-school program into five elementary schools within the district. This six-week program focused on engaging underserved girls in hands-on science and engineering activities while exposing them to careers in STEM fields through mentorship. Sixty-five girls participated in the district-supported program with discussions of expansion into the middle schools in the future. Students reported having an increased interest in both math and science after participating in the program and increased likelihood of pursuing a career in STEM. Parents reported positive feedback from their students during the program; students engaged parents in discussions of lessons learned, project design and overall interest in program participation.

“When my daughter came home from SciGirls, she did not give the usual, ‘nothing happened at school today’ speech. She was so excited about each activity and would share how she designed a parachute or how she discovered she has the gene to taste bitterness. She was excited about science and engaged, and I loved that about this program.”

Good to Know: Common Core Concepts for Parents

As schools in New York State shifted to new approaches to mathematics education, it became evident that parents and caregivers needed support as they tried to help their children with homework. WSKG collaborated with local Teacher Centers, exemplary math teachers, and families to develop an on-demand series titled Good to Know. This project supports at-home learning and in-classroom instruction at grades levels Pre-K, Kindergarten, and Grade 1 through twenty on-demand videos of foundational math concepts. The videos are hip, fun, and non-intimidating – encouraging learners to watch ‘as many times as you need’! Good to Know is available online, as an app, and at PBSLearningMedia.org.

WSKG Classroom Elements

In an effort to help youth think critically about our community, WSKG developed and published classroom guides based on Johnson and Watson local documentaries as well as our Path Through History shorts series. This project aligns with state and national learning standards for Social Studies. The multi-media project offers learners the opportunity to engage with video clips, audio, photographs, discussion questions and activities. WSKG classroom elements were also uploaded to PBSLearningMedia.org and utilized during teacher professional development workshops throughout the community.

Youth Media

WSKG’s efforts around engaging youth through media continued to boom during 2015! Working with four partner sites and dozens of middle and high school students, participants worked one on one with WSKG producers and reporters. Youth created multi-media projects focusing on topics such as hydraulic fracturing and graduation rates. Their reports were shared via WSKG platforms including web, social media, TV, and report. Additionally, WSKG opened its doors to the new Youth Media Lab, a space specifically designed for students.

WIOX, our community radio station in the Catskills, continued to strengthen ties with the WSKG family.

Highlights included illuminating on-air conversations about the importance of community media, two successful fundraising events—the WIOX A-Go-Go Dance Party on-air-online simulcast and Stealing All Transmissions cocktail party and panel discussion with industry celebrities (with our very own Charlie Compton on the panel!). And let’s not forget the numerous community volunteers who make wildly diverse community radio possible.

WIOX programs are all live and hosted by community volunteers, reflecting local interests, expertise, and talents.

A number of new programs debuted this past year.

• Peter Mayer’s Graffiti Dog Super Art Now! (Peter is a world-renowned graffiti artist)
• Ben “Jammwin’” Erickson’s Life’s Good So Far (Ben is in 8th grade)
• Leigh Melander’s Myth America (Leigh holds a PhD in mythology)
• Dwight Grimm’s Cinema with a Twist (Dwight is a movie buff and mixologist)
• TJ Turgeon’s Ear of the Hurricane (TJ is a retired bank president and former soul singer)
• Will Soter’s The Great Outdoors (Will is a professional bushwhacker and mountain hiker)
• Brit Hotaling’s Grassroots (Brit lives the local upstate music scene)
• Michael Knapp’s The Main Event (an extreme sports fan)
• Alan Reynold’s Radio Truck Stop (a local mechanic, Alan drove a big rig cross-country for decades)

Our partners value their community radio station. These organizations are at the heart of WIOX’s local collaborative spirit. They help spread the word about WIOX programs, provide information about local events, link to our website/stream, and contribute in other meaningful ways. The new relationships formed in 2015 are both budding and exciting.

• The Maurice D. Hinchey Catskill Interpretive Center
• The Catskill Mountain News
• The Mountain Eagle
• The Catskill Forest association
• The Alzheimer’s Association of Northeast New York
• Delaware County Chamber of Commerce
• Schoharie Dam Concerned Citizens
• Delaware County Public Health
• Otsego Northern Catskills BOCES-CROP

WIOX continues to foster relationships that help grow membership and partnership opportunities. Grants from The Alzheimer’s Association of NENY and The Catskill Forest Association; underwriting from the Catskill Center for Conservation and Development and The Catskill Mountain Foundation; and donations from listeners from New York City and north Jersey to Albany and points west joined our local listeners and contributing volunteers with their financial support.
In fiscal year 2015, WSKG’s operating budget (without depreciation expense) was $5,301,000. $2,612,000 (49%) of our total annual operating revenue comes directly from local contributions. Federal and State funding combine for $1,725,000 (33%) of revenue. Art, history, news, science, and youth programming, along with education and community outreach, accounted for 71% of WSKG’s expenses. Community outreach and upgrades to technology made it possible to provide underserved communities with enhanced public media services.
